The Chinese Umbrella Hat Project (Part II) Venice 2011

An intercultural project by Andrea Bianconi, curated by Oliver Orest Tschirky. The Italian artist Andrea Bianconi connects East and West by building an artistic bridge with 88 dressed models between art hot spots Shanghai and Venice with an intercultural, poetic and fascinating project.

Andrea Bianconi built and decorated the symbolic number of 88 Chinese umbrella hats and special silk dresses.

The first part of the public art intervention took place in Shanghai in the second week of September. Dressed with the special umbrella hats and Chinese silk clothes, 88 Chinese models were walking in the form of a cloud through the city of Shanghai.

This summer, on Saturday June 4 2011, during the opening of La Biennale di Venezia, the performance will see its second part and logical extension take place in Venice, with 88 Chinese people living in Italy representing their culture and presence.

04.06.2011 / 4 - 6 pm / Piazza San Marco / Viale dei Giardini Pubblici, Venice
(During the opening week of the Venice Biennale 2011)

TINA B. Contemporary Art Festival in Prague

The TINA B. Festival — A unique event organized every year in Prague by Vernon Gallery. In October and November 2011 Prague will again become a modern art mecca. Like every year, art and artists from Central Europe and around the world will descend on the capital of the Czech Republic.

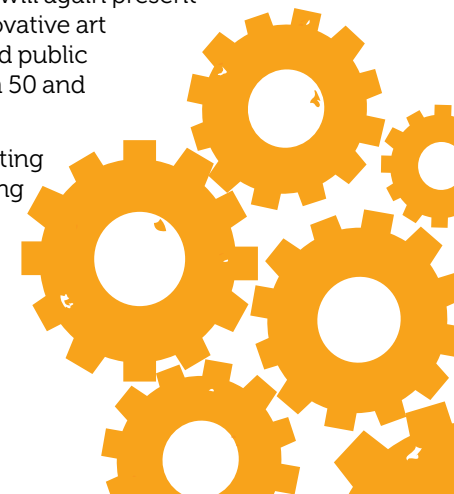

TINA B. stands for 'This Is Not Another Biennial'. The name is also intended to evoke the idea of a sensual figure – the patroness of the festival – a mysterious woman with an ever-changing visage, who lures thousands of visitors to the Prague festival each year.

The sixth year of the TINA B. festival will take place in Prague from 20 October to 13 November 2011. Like last year, in 2011 the festival will again present art that employs new artistic methods and uses innovative art techniques in video art, light art, performance art and public installations. Each year we present work by between 50 and 100 artists from all over the world.

In 2011 TINA B.'s motto is ART – ECO – BIO. We're letting the artists create new, creative, 'green' works reflecting ideas for social behaviour in the space we inhabit.

Come to Prague for the VIP days full of openings, discussions and special events:
20.10 - 23.10.2011.
